

Latinska prefix i engelskan

av Åke Lundström, Arne Olofsson, 1983

Sök reda på en översättning där prefixbetydelsen är tydlig:

He had abjured () his forefathers' faith.

It is a crime to abduct () people.

The doctor ordered him to abstain () from beer and wine.

He adored () his charming wife.

I think you are alluding () to something special.

He attributes () his success to hard work.

Their failure does not give me a bad conscience ().

Everybody conspired () against the tyrant.

I decline () to discuss the matter further.

They are mourning their deceased ().

Have you deducted () £ 5 for my expenses ()?

You must not disperse () your money so thoughtlessly!

The disobedience () of the children is increasing.

I tried to finish my job but my illness disabled () me.

The police had failed to extort () a confession from the accused.

I had noticed the word 'exit' () above one of the doors.

They were ejected () from the meeting because of their behaviour.

A new paragraph was inserted () in the statutes.

The input of the money into this business was immense ().

The criminals were imprisoned () immediately.

Shakespeare's fame is immortal ().

Such ideas may do infinite () harm.

My feelings of gratitude are inexpressible ().

The interurban () railway is not functioning today.

It was necessary to intervene () in their quarrel.

Please don't interfere () in my business.

He succeeded in obviating () all dangers.

Any objections () to the plan will be listened to.

This coat is guaranteed to be absolutely impermeable ().

Recently a strange idea has pervaded () some newspapers.

The pre-war () situation was quite different.

John the Baptist was a precursor () of Christ.

Every society needs some precepts () for the behaviour of people.